

London boutique launches new private wealth advisory service

Delmore Asset Management, a wealth advisory firm based in London's Baker Street, has appointed Peter Stanyer as the firm's economist and strategist to lead a new private wealth strategic advisory service.

Stanyer will work alongside Howard Goldring, Delmore's chairman and founder, at Delmore Strategic Advisers (DSA), which will offer independent strategic and tactical investment advice together with risk management to family offices and sophisticated private investors.

Stanyer, who has worked closely with Delmore since 2003, began his career as an economist with the Bank of England and is a former managing director with the private client division of Merrill Lynch.

"We are delighted that Peter has joined Delmore to lead our family office wealth management service. The extraordinary volatility over the last few years has borne out many of Peter's insights into managing wealth," said Goldring.

Delmore Asset Management offers three main services from bespoke private client portfolio management to asset allocation advice and family office services.
